

Discover the Magic

By: Mathew Toss

The world is full of magic and wonder
Like fractals or the rolling of thunder
We try as we age to keep magic front stage
But for many it gets torn asunder

The goal of this little poem
Is to remind you before you leave home
That the wonders don't cease but, rather, increase
The farther and wider you roam

The world is large and uncharted
Awaiting the brave lionhearted
Hunt the obscure, chase the allure
Your journey has only just started

But a truth you should never forget
One that perhaps you haven't learned yet
Though mysteries abound, the world all around,
Remember the love that you get

From God, from family and friends
Love is constant and never depends
On conditions or deeds, or relies upon needs,
Love simply protects and defends

So travel and discover the earth
While enjoying the magic and mirth
But when the day's done, and you're recounting your fun,
Let it be with someone of worth
